History

Background

Elizabeth is being raised by her aunt Christine Kirsch, who works from home as a computer security consultant.[1] When she is ten she and her aunt move to Forks, Washington.[2] A few months after her arrival she goes over to Charlie Swan's house to meet Bella Swan, who is visiting for the summer, and they become friends[3]

Narnia

During a discussion of fairy tales Bella mentions a boy who, many years ago, went missing from the abandoned house in town; this peaks Elizabeth's interest and she decides to investigate the house.[4] Searching the wardrobe for the boy's body, she instead encounters Narnia, and meets the faun Mr. Tummus.[5] He is fascinated to meet a human girl and invites her over for tea, but breaks down in tears and admits he had been planning to hand her over to the White Witch.[6] He returns her safely to the wardrobe, where she realizes she has only been gone for a few minutes, and the time she spent at tea has vanished.[7] She remains stuck on the problem of the world she remembers encountering, but logically does not exist, for some time afterwards.[7]
