"I don't care if you care. I'll make myself how I want." - Stella

History

Stella follows the standard Bell background, her divergence starts when she moves to Forks and meets Alice when she observes another boy beating him in school, a experience that Alice was enjoying.

Alice unusual behavior caught Stella's attention and she aproached him, she realize that Alice was probably being physicially abused by his father. They had a few conversations and one day, Stella was extremely bored and the joker invited her over to his house.

Before allowing him to take her to his home, Stella decided to test how safe she was by calling Alice a "freak" while she almost calling her dad phone's. Alice reaction to this was to fall in love with her. While in the Hammond residence, she realized Alice's parents mannerisms, notably, Stella met Delaney Hammond Sr. and realized how strict the man was and how his behavior was on the verge of unstable.

Alice opened to Stella, including why his family moved to Forks: Alice was raped and his father covered it up.

When Hammond Sr. was on a week long trip, Alice decided to invite Stella over once again. Alice decided to show her his favorite book - which was in his bedroom - while walking through the bedroom's mess Stella tripped and fell through the solid wall of a old chimney.

Stella found herself in a weird room with sourceless light, a broken leg, a book and six-sided coin.

Relationships

“After we'd known each other for a few days and had a handful of casual conversations and I'd broken up a fight between him and a random classmate in the cafeteria, he invited me over to his house. Before I said yes, I told him I was going to conduct an experiment. I put my dad the police chief's number into my phone, hovered my finger over the call button, and called him a freak. And he asked me to marry him." She pauses. "I said no.” - Stella talking about Alice to Jokes.
